

CAMP HURON LAKE

Dear Mom and Dad,

It was great to see you on Visiting Day

It was so awesome when all the boys and I were on the porch of the bunk and we watched you running right by who we think was Usain Bolt. You were so much faster than when you chased after the bus at the drop off a few weeks ago. Your pilates performer training must be helping. All the other kids now know where I get my ~~athletasizm~~ athletic ability from.

Although I appreciate it, I didn't need the better part of the M&M's/Mars total domestic inventory you brought. Also, the three dozen donuts, six boxes of assorted chips and the massive chocolate fountain you set up in the bunk were a bit overboard. Goldstein nearly drowned when he stuck his head in it. I know you do all of this because you love me and you like to show off to all the other moms.

Also, I have so many MadLibs that I use as toilet paper when the bunk runs out so don't send any more up.

Those hoodys that you had made up are really cool. I love how it has the Under Armor logo on it with our bunk number. Danny Rosenberg isn't aloud to wear it because his dad is a pattered lawyer and said something about "copyright infringement". I don't know what that means though but i think it's something legal.

After you left our councelers pretty much took all of our leftovers and have been eating them for the past two days. Our head counselor Jerry is in a sugar-induced coma right now in the infirmery but he's supposed to pull through. The other two councelers have been taking turns vomiting in the middle toilet stall so we've been doing whatever we want.

Oh yeah. You promised to buy me a dog when I get home if I am nice to my sister. So far I haven't ~~punched~~ been mean to her one time since you left so I'm doing good.

See you in a few weeks!

Love,

Jake

PS Send candy and money